Improvements Made By Salmon's Store

One of Leading Grocery Concerns Makes Decidedly Attractive Place of Establishment—Interior Redecorated and Stock Rearranged So that It Cannot Help but Appeal to Visitor—W. D. Salmon, Head of Firm, Pioneer in Business.

It is within the province of every good newspaper to make mention of every improvement in its community of interest to the public. Therefore it has no hesitancy in commenting on some changes recently made by one of Grenada's most progressive grocery concerns—W. D. Salmon & Co. Its store has been rearranged, and the stock so placed that it makes the whole store look entirely new. The changes in arrangement, which are made in accordance with the taste and the instructions of the most up to date store arrangers, make altogether a most ideal looking store.

This store, with Mr. W. D. Salmon as the senior member, has been one of the leading firms of Grenada for now more than twenty years. When the business was first opened on the north side of the street just opposite where it now is, the firm was W. D. Salmon & Co., but at the close of war Mr. Salmon offered a partnership to Mr. O. L. Kimbrough, who became interested last year in the store of the late B. C. Duncan which necessitated his withdrawing from the firm. The business is still operated as W. D. Salmon & Company.

Mr. Salmon is an expert in the grocery business. He knows how to make purchases for the trade and he knows the best way to hold his trade, and that best way is by being always and at all times the square man and the one who will endeavor to see the other man's viewpoint when their minds do not travel together.

Mr. Salmon knows how to make pretty and attractive a stock of goods. He knows how to make them show to the best advantage, and this is another evidence that he desires to please and that he studies how best to appeal to the good judgment and refined tastes of others. This is always to be commended. Nature has painted the most beautiful picture that ever was. The stars above, the beautiful blue sky, the laughing sunbeams, the modest rays of the moon, the verdant earth with all it contains are all beyond the power of man to adequately describe; so it is when a merchant undertakes to make his store a work of real art he is but emulating the example set by Nature.

One needs but to glance in on this store to see that its owner is thinking not alone of self but of others. It is no small task to arrange a big stock of merchandise with the symmetry and that care and precision that it will at once appeal to the eye and that will cause observers to involuntarily look the store through.

This firm is known throughout the length and the breadth of this trade territory. It has long served many customers who just refuse to go elsewhere. It has a growing trade. The Sentinel is fully advised that its business has increased year by year.The stock is large. The firm has succeeded in moving its goods so quickly that it is always able to offer the freshest and best to the trade. The business could not have so prospered if the merchandise sold had not been all claimed for it and had not the prices been what every reasonable customer had every right to expect. The character of the business already done is the very best guarantee to the trade today. Every enterprise in some measure has its past reflected in its business of today and particularly is this true of a mercantile establishment.

W. D. Salmon is the salt of the earth. He is a true and tried friend when he pretends to be and stands like truth on the Rock of Gibraltar at all times. He was reared about 15 miles northwest of Grenada in the old Ross mill community. His first business venture was as a salesman in the grocery department of the store of his uncle, the late John W. Griffis. From this well poised and successful man Mr. Salmon got some lessons that have greatly aided him in all his business endeavors. He was reared in a home that made honesty and truth its standard in meeting the business world. Mr. Salmon's life thoroughly substantiates the Biblical statement that when a child is trained right he will live right.

While Mr. Salmon has devoted most of his time to his grocery business he has given some attention to other matters which have met with marked success. He is today and has been since soon after its organization vice-president of the Grenada Grocery Co., one of Mississippi's leading wholesale grocery houses. He is also a stockholder and director in the Grenada Bank system, one of the strongest financial organizations in the South.

Salmon's large and popular store is located on the south side of Depot or First Street, at the corner of Depot or First and Doak Streets. It has a commanding location from many angles, and its owner is making a wise and excellent use of all these advantages and opportunities.

The firm has always bought in the largest quantities possible and will continue to do this and is therefore able to guarantee that it will continue to offer the best in every line at the lowest reasonable prices. The store has two phones. It has a well equipped motor truck and is therefore easily prepared to serve the good housekeepers of the town on short notice.

W. D. Salmon would appreciate a visit to the store. He or one of his capable and accommodating salesmen will take a keen delight in explaining the new arrangement and of telling you how the owners think the new display and arrangement will enable them to improve their already excellent service.

Whether you buy or not, this firm most cordially invites you to make an inspection of their store. Possibly you may learn something that is worth while to you and at the same time you will make Mr. Salmon and the entire force happy and glad to show you and when one can add to the pleasure of others, he makes an investment that is more than worth while.

NEW PAPER CURRENCY IS NOVEL AND ATTRACTIVE

Uncle Sam's new paper currency which was put into general circulation Wednesday, July 10, is indeed novel and attractive. Its novelty comes from the fact that it is a great deal smaller than the old currency and crisp, new money is always attractive. In truth all money is attractive but it is especially so when new.

The new bills are six and five-sixteenths by two and eleven-sixteenths inches. Washington's image is engraved on the one-dollar bills, Jefferson's on the two-dollar ones, Lincoln's on the five-dollar, Hamilton's on the ten, and Jackson's on the twenty. The treasury seals and serial numbers are printed in color, on United States notes in red, in blue for silver certificates, in yellow for gold certificates, in green for Federal Reserve notes and in brown for national bank notes.

The vast amount of work involved in the printing of this new currency cannot easily be comprehended. No less than 912,000,000 individual pieces had to be printed in order to make the complete turnover, and the number of operations entering into the printing is in itself extensive. Then, when one considers the task of assembling and delivering the notes to the Treasury, it is small wonder that the bureau briefly reported that its capacity had been "strained to the utmost".

It is claimed that the government will save $1,500,000 annually by the reduction in the size of the currency.

MRS. JOHN R. GARNER DIES

Mrs. John R. Garner passed away at her home in Grenada Monday, July 8th, at 2 p. m. after a lingering illness. During the early part of the year she was stricken with paralysis from which she never recovered. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday morning from the residence by Rev. W. E. Farr, pastor of the First Baptist Church, after which her remains were laid to rest in Odd Fellows Cemetery besides those of her husband who passed to the beyond eight years ago.

Mrs. Garner was born in Eskridge, Montgomery county, more than three score years ago. When a young girl, she moved to Grenada and here she had made her home ever since. She was a lifelong member of the Baptist church and was a true follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. She was ever considerate and thoughtful of the wishes of others, she was kindly, she was patient, she was forbearing. She was at her best, however, as a mother and was devoted to her two children. She was just as solicitous of their welfare after they had reached maturity as she was when they were little tots and she lavished upon them that care and that devotion evidenced only by the good mother.

Besides her two children, a daughter, Mrs. H. M. Brown, of Grenada, and a son, Edward Garner, of Compton, Calif., other relatives survive to whom The Sentinel tenders its deepest sympathy.

WINONA BEATS GRENADA

Before a large holiday crowd Winona baseball team took Grenada's measure to the tune of 7 to 4 on the local diamond last Thursday afternoon, July 4th. Winona took the lead early in the game, amassing four runs in the third inning. In the seventh, the score was tied, three of the runs coming when Provine, local pitcher, tripled with the bases full. Winona came back in its half of the eighth and scored three more runs and held this lead until the game was called in the ninth on account of a veritable downpour of rain.

Brunson, of Meridian, pitched a fine game for the visitors.

JULY 4TH PAGEANT MARRED BY WEATHER

Rain and Windstorm Prevents Many from Attending Fourth of July Pageant at Fair Grounds—Miss Grace Brown Crowned "Miss North Mississippi".

Miss Grace Brown, of Duck Hill, niece of Dr. G. Y. Gillespie, of Duck Hill, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Brown, of Oxford, was crowned "Miss North Mississippi" in the beauty contest featuring the "Pageant of Progress" Thursday, July 4th, at the fairgrounds. Miss Brown is a member of the junior class at the University of Mississippi and is considered one of the most beautiful and accomplished young ladies in that school. She won over a group of beautiful girls representing several of the larger north Mississippi towns, thereby winning for herself an honor of which she may feel justly proud. Miss Sallie Billups, of Grenada, finished a close second to Miss Brown. So close was the competition that the judges held a second count on their "beauty sheets".

Owing to a very hard wind and rainstorm the crowd did not come near up to expectations but those who were present were more than delighted with the program. The pageant, one of the most extensive ever attempted in this section of the state, took the things that go to make up a progressive community and showed their place in the progress of the state.

Patriotism was depicted by the Water Valley National Guard going through a few snappy drill numbers and forming a background for Miss Virginia Smith whose flag dance was one of the hits of the evening. W. D. Boone, as a drunken sailor singing, "Where did Robinson Crusoe go with Friday on Saturday night?", almost caused a riot.

Education, represented by students of "Ole Miss", A and M., Grenada College, and Miss Elizabeth Goza, of Grenada High, made known the fact that north Mississippi stood far out in front as an educational section. Robinson Horton, Ole Miss law student, made one of the most impressive addresses of the evening, his subject being "What Ole Miss means to North Mississippi".

One of the main features of the program was the religious singing by a large and well trained choir. Mrs. Henry Ray and her assistants had spared no efforts in bringing together this wonderful body of singers and under the leadership of Mrs. Ben Graham they proved a credit to the community. Their part of the program alone was well worth braving the stormy weather to hear.

The chorus trained by Misses Betz and Smith was one of the best ever seen in this part of the state. Its first number, a tricky dance full of snappy, peppy steps, received a large amount of applause yet it was completely enveloped by the second number, a beautiful waltz costumed in various colored evening dresses. Misses Betz and Smith did a specialty health and beauty dance that was well received and their dairy dance, assisted by Miss Chloe Lufkin, as a farmer lad, was one of the high lights of the evening.

S. A. Law, of Memphis, was master of ceremonies, in charge of the program. He made a very interesting talk in introducing George Trafford, also of Memphis, who amused the audience with his impersonation of chickens, dogs, hogs, etc., and his harp impersonation of the Panama Limited leaving Grenada was especially good. He was brought to Grenada by the Illinois Central Booster Club, of which E. M. Sherwood, Grenada station agent, is chairman and president. The Booster Club was also represented by "The Humming Birds", a quartette of colored shop boys of Memphis, who rendered several very amusing and delightful songs.

The orchestra selected and directed by J. E. Lufkin, was splendid and the music rendered was well received. Several of those playing in this group were real artists and those who heard them realized that they were getting a real treat. Mr. Boone, as the masked singer, created quite a sensation and received much applause after the first wave of surprise had passed.

OPEN AIR GOSPEL MEETING TO BE HELD AT TIE PLANT

The meeting will continue through the week at the same hour. Everyone is given a most cordial invitation to attend.

The usual morning service will be held Sunday at Central Baptist Church. None will be held in the church that evening but all are invited to join in the meeting at Tie Plant.

MINISTRY—THE LAW OF LIFE

(By Bishop Theodore D. Bratton

I have accepted your invitation to address you, extended through my honored friend, Mr. J. T. Thomas, not because I had any remotest dream that I could enlighten bankers upon the duties of their calling, but from the sole motive of honor and pleasure in the invitation, and anticipation of delightful profit from the association with you. I am sure that you do not expect me to fill the first role of enlightener of bankers, from which my ignorance acquits me. I am equally sure that you welcome me to the latter as the lover of my brother men and the profoundly interested co-partner of those who are the guardians of the security and peace and happiness of the society which they serve.

In this I recognize the kinship of your calling with mine, - that we are both servers of humanity and of God, - you thorough your ministry in the great Temple of Commerce, - and through my ministry in the spiritual Temple of God, not made with hands. The philosophy of life is simple and clear to those who accept God as He has revealed Himself through Prophets and Seers, and more perfectly through His Incarnate Son. It is briefly this: life is of the creative will of God, - human life akin to the Creator's, and to that of His creatures and holding natural relations to the spiritual and material. The destiny of human life is conformity to the spiritual, i. e., to the permanent and the eternal, - man's immediate duty is so to use the material that it puts no bar to the attainment of destiny, but rather promotes the ultimate purpose of life. Made in God's image, personality is the companion of God, - His co-partner and fellow worker in the consummation of life's purpose. Man's ideals are, therefore, not of the earth but are one with God's. The keynote of such a co-partnership is ministry; its patern is expressed in the Patern Man, "I am among you as He that serveth". Its motive is declared to be of the nature of life itself, for the source of it is God who is love, and love is revealed, (in the Son of God who is equally Son of man), to be the exchange of life. Thus life in us is fulfilled alone in love, i.e., in the exchange of life with others, the spending of life for others, - which is the essence of ministry. Moreover, it is thus only that life grows. It is by the spending of life that the paradox of life is fulfilled. It is inspiration that has so tersely expressed this, which experience so amply attests, "there is that scattereth and yet increaseth", and again "he that loseth his life shall find it", "he that saveth his life shall lose it". These are not merely the expression of a spiritual ideal; they are primarily the utterance of the fundamental, necessary law of life, - true in the experience of life long before it ever found place in the Book of Inspiration. That life is of God at once places it beyond the possibility of definition; but it equally at once declares its inevitable characteristic, - that it is movement, increasing movement good or bad, which neither sleep nor what we call death arrests. That life is love defies definition; but tnis too at once declares the purpose of its ceaseless movement, - that it is fulfilling itself only in ministry to others, - increasing itself only by giving itself, - finding itself only by losing itself, in others. For love, - whatever it is in its essence we cannot define, - is in its characteristic movement, the losing of self in others and the finding of self in the losing.

I wonder if any one here will gainsay me, when I declare that this principle, this law, of life is universal in its application to all the callings of life? that it is the fundamental law of banking, however various and varying the details of the application may be, as banking seeks to fulfill its ministry in the Temple of Commerce?

Preparing this short address, I opened an old and favorite Encyclopoedia and found this comment under the title "Bank"; "In nearly all languages, the words for bank and banker are derived from those meaning table * * * * trapezites (Banker) among the Greeks, mensarius among the Romans, banchiero among the Italians."

Thus in all languages, the primary meaning of "Bank" is "Table" and of "Banker" is "One who serves a Table" - and the derivatives are fittingly emblematic of the purpose of the bank and the calling of the banker. I realize, of course, that figures must not be pressed beyond their appropriate application. Within legitimate limits how vivid are the applications of these expressive derivatives to your calling! A table is primarily a serving board, designed for ministry to physical needs, to social fellowship, to spiritual communion. The server of the table is the agent of its ministries. This has been the purpose of our family tables at home. The daily food is the social sacrament of the family. Father and mother are the servers of the table. Their food provided is the emblem at once of their felt re-

ells Of Auto Trip To Okolona July 4

Beautifully Level Country between Here and There—Grenada Veritable Hopper into Which Treasures Destined to Be Poured—Great Crops. Thoughts of Dr. Pulliam of Years Ago—Among Others, Was Accompanied by Grandson, Ellett.

(By O. F. Lawrence)

Made automobile trip with my daughter, Bernice, and her friend, Louise Stokes, and most important of all my elder grandson, Ellett, to Okolona July 4, where we spent the day with my older sister, Mrs. S. Grantham, and family. Had a good chauffeur. Greatly enjoyed the day.

Made trip over highway No. 8 until about 5 miles of Okolona, one of the capitals of Chickasaw county, when we turned into highway No. 23.

The road was superb—as nearly superb as it is posible for a graveled road to be. Could but think how much better a concrete road would be and particularly how much one would save my automobile, especially the tires. There is scarcely anything a greater luxury than an automobile and there are but few things that are a greater liability than an automobile. Luxuries, even if they are modest ones, always cost. As one speeds along in an automobile in Mississippi and reflects that the gravel over which he is traveling is figured by those who ought to know as costing him 2 cents more on every mile than would concrete, he begins to wonder, and will say inaudibly, "But how can we pay for concrete roads?".

But roads were not what I started to write about. I saw the most universal promise of a big crop that has been in this section for years. Corn has a fine black color. Much of it calls to mind the old farmer's prayer at a neighborhood prayer meeting called to ask the Father to break the drouth. The old brother said: "Oh Lord may the rain come, may it come in torrents, a root soaker and a gully washer so that we may make corn with ears as big as ash hoppers and grain as big as iron wedges, and don't forget, Dear Master, that we want no mill to be able to grind this corn except Bro. Ross'". If there were ever ash hopper corn in sight, crop appearances seem to assure it now.

Cotton is growing. It is clean. It has been well worked. There are but two things that can give concern at present as to the outlook and that is that the plant is not normal in size and what the boll weevil may do.

It is just one beautiful field after another from here to Okolona, a distance of 74 miles. The highway runs through level land. Nature has done marvelous things all along the way—Nature has no failures charged to it. It would seem that Nature has opened its most beautiful, most charming and most enduring silver chest and scattered its contents all through this section.

As we sped along many things came into our mind but one of the chief things that we realized was that of Grenada's splendid location and what the future is bound to bring to this Garden of Eden as she nestles between the great prairie and hill section on the east and the alluvial and world-feeding delta on the west.

Grenada—midway between the state's capital and Memphis, with one arm reaching into the delta and the other touching the beautiful, level section for 90 miles east, a vertible hopper into which this great section for miles and miles are destined to pour their treasures. Like many of the precious metals of the world which lie just underneath the soil and at our very feet, what Grenada is destined to be will be realized as soon as her citizens lift their eyes from the easy, lucky and just everyday affairs, and look at this rainbow which spans her skies and which speaks in tones that are encouraging and that give assurance of a busy city of 50,000 people. This will be when we get those enterprises and industries, those schools and colleges which proclaim Grenada people one of calculating minds and who believe in and who practice the spirit of the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God. That town or city or business which is not built upon the rocks that are eternal cannot abide.

A trip eastward on highway No. 8 will give one a picture of what sound business by Grenadians together with capital of the right sort will bring here.

Regardless of the fact that farming throughout the land is not profitable and that 85 per cent of the farmers have their farms mortgaged, yet reason speaks and says that these things cannot continue to be. The house that is founded upon the rocks is destined to stand regardless of how high the water may get over the foundations and of how severely the storm lashes these foundations. The paintings above,

YOUNG LADIES ENTERTAIN GRENADA ROTARY CLUB

Misses Rowena Betz and Vera Smith, two of Grenada's most attractive young women, entertained the Grenada Rotary Club at its meeting Tuesday with a song and dance sketch in costume, "Down on the Farm". For an encore they sang "Broadway Melody". Miss Catherine Lufkin, equally as attractive and accomplished, accompanied them at the piano. The program by these three was thoroughly enjoyed and Rotarians are looking forward to their appearance before the club again at an early date.

Rotarian Nelson Taylor, of Greenwood, was a guest at the luncheon.

President B. J. Anderson stated that the various committees for the year had been named and that he would announce the names at next Tuesday's meeeing.

NEELY GETS FIRST CHECK FOR 1929 BALE OF COTTON

The first person in Grenada county to receive a check for a bale of cotton ginned from the 1929 crop, if The Sentinel is advised correctly, is Mr. J. H. Neely, president of the Grenada Auto Co., Inc. Mr. Neely's bale of cotton was ginned Wednesday of last week.

However, this cotton was not raised in Grenada county. It grew on Mr. Neely's ranch near Weslaco, in Hidalgo county, Texas, in the lower Rio Grande valley. He has eighteen acres there in citrus trees and while the trees are maturing the land is being utilized for cotton, corn and other crops.

BANK OFFICIALS MEET AT LOUISVILLE JULY 8

Stockholders of Grenada Bank System Hold Semi-Annual Gathering July 8th. Bishop Bratton Addresses Meeting on "Ministry—the Law of Life".

The semi-annual meeting of the stockholders, officers and directors of the Grenada Bank system was held Monday, July 8th, in Louisville, with the Bank of Louisville, one of the institutions in this strong financial chain, acting as host.

For years, these semi-annual gatherings were held in Grenada with the parent bank playing the role of host to the many who attended but last year a departure from the usual custom was made when the meeting was held in Cleveland.

After the business meeting when the various reports from those directing the destinies of the various institutions were heard, the usual 7% semi-annual dividend declared and all officers re-elected, Bishop Theodore D. Bratton, of Jackson, among the leaders of the Episcopal Church in the South, addressed the gathering of bankers and visitors. The Bishop's subject was "Ministry—the Law of Life" and his address appears in full in another part of this paper. As will be seen by a study of his remarks, the Bishop is a master of the English language and a deep thinker and it shows, too, that he studies the character of his audiences in choosing his words. Bishop Bratton is dearly beloved by all who know him and whatever he says is always especially of interest to them.

J. T. Thomas, the directing head of the Grenada Bank and its twelve branches, has few equals in the banking business. He keeps at his fingertips the details of this vast organization and that he has wrought well is evidenced by the strength and the stability of the financial institutions under his direction. One of the highest tributes to his ability and his personality is the loyalty engendered in the employees of the thirteen banks, all of whom hold the deepest affection and respect for him.

Following the speaker's address, a splendid dinner was served, during which others who were present were heard from.

The sessions were held in the Louisville high school auditorium and the dinner was served in one of the large classrooms of that building.

"Force" and "Energy"

There is a difference in physics between force and energy. A force is considered as anything that produces or tends to produce, destroy or change motion. Energy is the capacity for doing work and it may exist in the form of motion, heat, sound, light, electricity, etc. This capacity may exist even though no force is being exercised.

I. Ezekiel's Responsibility (vv. 1-9).

The commission of the prophet is now renewed. Hitherto his utterances were mainly of a threatening character, having as their objective the turning of the people from their wicked ways. They refused to heed the prophet's words, the result of which was the falling of God's judgment upon them in their complete captivity and the destruction of Jerusalem. When it became clear that the people would not heed God's warnings through the prophet, the prophet was to be silent—dumb. This tragic situation was portrayed through the death of Ezekiel's wife. Awful as this blow was, he was to desist from weeping, showing that even natural sorrow was not to be expressed at the time of God's awful judgment.

After the renewal of the prophet's commission, his messages were mainly consolatory. His responsibility is set forth under the figure of a watchman. God gave him this position. Every minister and every Sunday school teacher is a watchman. Indeed, upon every believer has been imposed certain responsibilities. Every disciple of Christ is a warning to sinners. Two things are required of a watchman.

1. To hear the word at God's mouth (v. 7).

The source of the message of every minister and Sunday school teacher is God's Holy Word. As the prophet did not originate his message, but received it at God's mouth, so should it be with every minister.

2. To sound the warning (v. 7).

After hearing God's message he was to proclaim it to the people. The watchman's duty is both to hear and to speak. The people are to be warned of the impending danger. Failure to sound the alarm makes the watchman guilty of the blood of the sinner (v. 8). After the warning is sounded the sinner carries his own guilt (v. 9).

II. God's Attitude Toward the Sinner (vv. 10-11).

God has declared in His Word that unfaithfulness on the part of His people would cause them to "perish among the heathen," that they would "pine away in their iniquity" (Lev. 26:38, 39).

In view of this pronouncement, some were disposed to say that their case was hopeless. To meet this attitude of despair, the prophet assured them God had no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that His sincere desire was for the wicked to turn from his way and live. Regardless of what their past had been He assured them that the future was bright, but God's command and plea is, "Turn ye from your evil ways, for why will ye die, O house of Israel?" No one need despair because of sin, for God's grace is greater than human sin.

III. The Sinner's Personal Responsibility (vv. 12-20).

God has created the members of the race as volitional beings, possessing freedom of choice. They have moral discernment, enabling them to distinguish between right and wrong. The following principles govern the sinner and the watchman:

1. Past righteousness will not avail for present sins (v. 12).

When a righteous man turns to do iniquity, his past seeming righteousness will be of no avail.

2. Past sins do not make impossible present acceptance with God (vv. 12-14).

By virtue of the law of habit, every sinful act makes it harder for the sinner to repent, but God's mercy and enabling grace are that if the sinner repents, God will forgive and restore.

3. Restitution required (vv. 15, 16).

The proof of penitence is that so far as possible the sinner make amends for wrongs done. There is no merit in the act of restitution, but such act helps the individual to overcome his besetting sin.

4. God's ways are equal (vv. 17, 20).

God holds man responsible for his own deeds. The child is not condemned because of the deeds of its father. This does not do away with the law of heredity. Regardless of what one's past has been God's grace in Jesus Christ blots out his record and he stands accepted in the Beloved.

FELT BAD AFTER EATING

"FOUR YEARS ago, I suffered with heartburn and bilious indigestion. Whatever I ate disagreed with me. Gas on my stomach made me very uncomfortable. My tongue was coated and my color was bad.

"I needed a good laxative, and so my mother-in-law gave me some Black-Draught and told me to take it. I found it helped me very much, so I bought it for myself. Seems it was the very thing I needed. It is a fine family remedy, and I use it when I need something for constipation.

"I also give Black-Draught to my children whenever they need something for colds or upset stomachs. Our whole family takes Black-Draught." —Mrs. G. C. Leary, 103 North Alston Ave., Durham, N. C.

The Human Side of Big Business

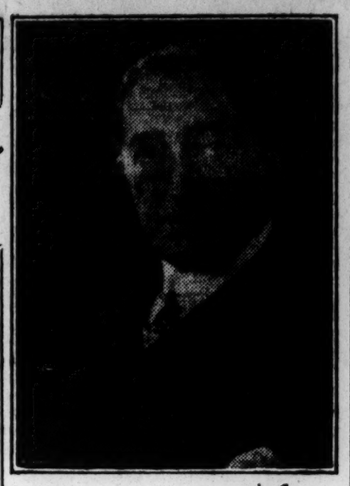
M. Georges Klotz, Head of the House of Pinaud, parfumeur, artist and industrialist, finds it possible to join tradition to modern science to promote a successful business.

By EDGAR MELS

After completing his education at the University of Paris, M. Georges Klotz directly entered his father's business, the House of Pinaud then over 100 years old, parfumeurs to royalty and the women of the world. He is now over sixty, a bachelor, literally married to his business.

During the war, although he was past the age for required service, M. Klotz served from the first day to the last as Captain. His employees were given an equal opportunity to serve under the colors of France and work was not resumed in full until conditions had returned to normal.

M. Klotz was made an officer of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services during those years.



Georges Klotz

"CREAMS, perfumes and cosmetics of all kinds are biological necessities today to the American woman." Georges Klotz, president and, with his brother, Henry, sole owners of the House of Pinaud which, for a century and a half since its founding in Paris, has stood for the highest standards in cosmetic history, was discussing his reasons for entering this field of business.

"As a business man, I believe in being engaged in an industry which is a necessity. With astounding rapidity the American woman has emerged from a sturdy pioneer into a distinguished and sophisticated personality who requires the most subtle nuances in the care and presentation of the person. This new sophistication must have the most delicate and scientific cosmetics. They have become for her a necessity."

The carrying out of a time-honored family tradition was the other reason given by M. Klotz for becoming a manufacturer of cosmetics. For 75 years the House of Pinaud has been in the hands of the Klotz family. From grandfather to father, from father to sons, the business descended and progressed, together with its traditions of poetry and romance. For him here was something more than individual gain. Here was the stewardship of an industrial patrimony.

Forty years ago M. Klotz came to America to study the American business which had been established ten years before. His philosophy of business could be expressed in the old saying, "When in Rome, do as the Romans do." For this reason the American branch of the House of Pinaud employs only the most modern of modern scientific methods, the machinery is the most efficient that money can buy and the entire plant bespeaks twentieth century power and speed. In France on the other hand, the delicate art of the hand artisan persists and a leisurely old-world atmosphere envelops the work rooms of the House of Pinaud.

"This is not inconsistent with the traditions of the firm," declared M. Klotz. "It is simply an adaptation of business principles without which no firm can succeed. American prosperity is in its infancy; it is only beginning. I base that assertion on the changes that I have observed in the years I have been visiting this country. The business man must build by making allowances for additional changes which will be a part of the logical future of this country. Therefore only modern methods are used here while handicraft, appropriately carries on in France."

M. Klotz was asked how he esteemed the attractions of American women of today. They were unbelievably beautiful, he admitted, but he gallantly dodged any comparison between nationalities. He confessed to an intense loyalty to the women of all the world.

"I am interested in the American woman's intense preoccupation with business, not only in commerce, but also in the business of creating and preserving her feminine illusion which, after all, is the highest need of both poetry and biology."

Pinaud's was the first French firm to originate the private pension system. Mr. Klotz's grandfather was one of the first French industrialists to sponsor the building of modern community homes and work out adequate housing systems for working people. The House of Pinaud, moreover, fifty years ago instituted a system of employers' liability insurance, which has been required by French law for the last two years only.

Following the war, the House of Pinaud began to expand under M. Klotz's direction. There are plants flourishing in Canada, Australia, Japan and India besides the American branch—and they are all under the directing finger of M. Klotz.

THINKS REPUBLICANS SHOULD NOT AID BISHOP

Dillsboro, N. C., July 5.—Charles J. Harris of Dillsboro, manufacturer and long prominent in Republican party affairs in North Carolina, can not understand why the Republicans of Virginia would be willing to effect fusion with the anti-Smith Democrats led by Bishop James Cannon, Jr. Mr. Harris today addressed the following letter to The Times:

"Editor of The Times:

"Speaking of Bishop Cannon's new political party in Virginia, I can not see how any self-respecting Republican can support it.

"Of course, it will attract some rough necks, bucket shop people and distorted minds who gloat over murder committed by half-drunk prohibition officers.

"(Signed), C. J. Harris."

Mr. Harris several years ago was Republican candidate for Governor of North Carolina. He was also for a few years owner and publisher of The Asheville Times.

Miss Alethea Betz gave her report on the convention at Greenville. Roll call and written reports were given. Holcomb had 8 present, Grenada Senior 4, Junior 2, Intermediates 5, Kirkman 12, Pleasant Grove 11, Graysport 23.

Mrs. G. W. Jennings gave a short talk. After another song the "Efficiency Banner" was awarded to the Graysport Union. Next we had an open period for discussion.

We had a short talk by Mr. E. T. Sweeney, after which the offering was taken ($7.81). Mr. Sweeney dismissed us with prayer.

"SISTER, "BROTHER" WHERE DID YOU GET IT?

When a lady walks into a store wearing a dress bought in Memphis, a hat in New Orleans and a pair of shoes purchased in Jackson and asks the merchants to help some church, civic or educational benefit, could he he blamed if he told her to go to—well, Memphis, Jackson or New Orleans.—Madison County Herald.

The above is taken from the Madison County (Canton) Herald. What the Herald states is a business philosophy that the citizens of all towns need to practice. Now that good roads and automobiles carry people to other towns quickly, the people of a town need to realize more fully that trade is a reciprocal matter. Boiled down, it is a case of "you tickle me and I tickle you".

Grenada needs to realize more than ever before what is the result of overlooking home merchants and other home concerns. Who is it that pays local taxes, that supports the local churches, whose taxes pay for your children, and everybody else's children, going to school? Who is it that takes care of benevolences and that contributes to the needy at our doors? Why, there is but one answer, and that is that the local merchant does the greater part of it.

What applies to the mercantile interests at home applies with equal force to every other local business or enterprise. Patronize them; try first to find your needs at the local business concern. When you trade with them you help yourself, your family, your neighbor and your friend.

There are some Grenada concerns which get most of their printing done in the cities, and this notwithstanding the fact that there are two offices in town which do high class printing.

The newspaper gives line after line of gratuitous matter that serves to help local institutions, and yet when it comes to printing, some of these beneficiaries never seem to think of the paper's commercial printing department. Oh. the answer, maybe, is, "we can beat the price a few dollars elsewhere". Possibly so, but dollars spent at home come back to us quickly. It is agreed by the country's most far seeing business men that newspaper space is a factor second to nothing else in giving men the ear of the world and in making business for a concern.

A thoughtful consideration of the newspaper's business department makes the paper careful to see that those who "tickle" it are likewise "tickled." Few indeed there be who are not pleased to see themselves, or the institution, with which they are connected, favorably mentioned in any newspaper. It pays.

Barnum, was one of the greatest newspaper advertisers the country ever had. It made him, he said. Newspaper space took him from poverty, almost, and obscurity and placed him before the whole world. It was the newspapers that enabled him to visit the crowned heads of the leading European nations. He frequently made public his acknowledgments of his debt of gratitude to the press.

In one of his statements as to the value of the press, he used these words: "If a man has goods for sale and he don't advertise them in some way, the chances are that some day the sheriff will do it for him".

To a man who said that he had run a newspaper ad three times and never got any results from it, Barnum answered: "Sir, advertising is like learning—'a little is a dangerous thing'. There is only one liquid that a man can use profitably and in excessive quantities without being swallowed up by it, and that is printer's ink."

We repeat there is little excuse for anything in the way of commercial printing going out of Grenada. One of the two offices here can do the work well, and when money is spent with them, you help yourself and help your town.

Likewise Grenada merchants can meet every need or demand.

THE FRIEND AROUND THE CORNER.

When did you see that friend around the corner? When did you step into his place of business and exchange some friendly words with him? When was the time that you placed your hand on his shoulder and looked him straight in the eyes and said, "Old fellow, this world would not be nearly so sweet to me if it were not for you. Did you know how very much I missed you when you spent that three weeks away from home, I feel sure that you would have experienced even more pleasure in returning home had you known how frequently you were in my mind".

Most of us get "down and out" at times. Unfortunate indeed is the man who does not yearn at times for the encouraging word. Regardless of how well fate may deal with us in a material way, it is a rare thing when one gets to the very inner secrets of the heart that he does not find that the man of big affairs and big business does not yearn for the comforting word.

The following little poem preaches a lesson that carries cheer, sunshine and happiness; let us resolve to say something nice to "Jim" today—he may not be here tomorrow or maybe we will not be here.

Around the corner I have a friend,
In this great city that has no end.
Yet days go by, and weeks rush on,
And before I know it a year has gone!
And I never see my old friend's face,
For life is a swift and terrible race.
He knows I like him just as well
As in the days when I rang his bell
And he rang mine. We were younger then,
And now we are busy, tired men;
Tired with playing a foolish game;
Tired with trying to make a name.
"Tomorrow," I say, "I will call on Jim,
Just to show that I am thinking of him."
But tomorrow comes, and tomorrow goes
And the distance between us grows and grows.
Around the corner—yet miles away * *
"Here's a telegram, sir * * Jim died today."
And that's what we get—and deserve in the end;
Around the corner—a vanished friend.

WHY FREIGHT DISCRIMINATION AGAINST THE FARMER?

The farmer has been knocked down, dragged out and beat over the head for these years in a business way. He catches the butt end of almost everything that touches his business. He got in debt and the "big ones" have so manipulated the politics and the economics of the country as to keep him in debt. He has been passive; he is largely to blame for his own condition, yet much of it he could not thwart. He has allowed it "rubbed in on him".

During the consideration of the Farm Relief bill in the lower house of congress a few weeks ago, Congressman Marvin Jones, of Texas, undertook to show how the farmer is discriminated against in many ways. He gave some concrete figures as to freight rates which serve to show how the protective tariff gouges the farmers and consumers of this country. Another, and a startling thing to us, is how can the Interstate Commerce Commission justify a lower freight rate on goods to be shipped abroad than on goods to be used in domestic markets?

Mr. Jones said:

"I recently asked the Interstate Commerce Commission about the difference in rates between shipments for foreign and domestic markets. I find that farm implements, when they are intended for use in this country, bear a rate almost twice as high as the same implements bear when they are intended for use in foreign countries. For instance, farm implements shipped from Chicago to San Francisco for export trade carry a railroad rate of one dollar per hundred; if they are intended for domestic use, the freight charge is $1.93 per hundred. This is a direct export bounty or premium. If it is all right to pay an export premium in the form of reduced rates which must be made up in the rise of the general rate structure of the country for the exportation of farm implements which our farmers must buy when they produce surplus crops, is it unfair to allow them an export premium on their surplus commodities when they ship abroad and which they produced with these farm implements? Farm implements shipped from Cincinnati to New Orleans bear a rate of 38½ cents per hundred if intended for the export trade and 69 cents per hundred if they are intended for domestic use. In other words, loading them at the same station and unloading them at the same station, freight rates are nearly twice as much on farm implements when purchased by the farmers of this country than when they go into the export trade. A foreigner, when he buys an automobile, pays half rates and the America farmer pays full rates. The Interstate Commerce Commission has power over these rates."

EXCESSIVE SPENDING KILLS SUCCESS.

It is almost alarming when one takes a survey of the young men of the country and ascertains that they are spending practically all they make.

A compilation made some months ago by a recognized authority showed that young married people were living to the limit of their income. The social demands together with automobiles and automobile upkeep are keeping the noses of many to the grindstone.

We were little less than astonished to see a statement credited to Henry Ford not long since to the effect that "it is foolish for a young man to try to save money before he reaches 40 years of age". Ford's statement again illustrates that the shoemaker who undertakes to instruct in the classics acts the fool.

S. W. Strauss, a successful business man and president of the American Society for Thrift, gave out a statement that is a pretty safe chart for every young couple, every young man, indeed for all. He said:

"Many persons are unable to make progress in their personal affairs simply because, unconsciously, they are paying just a little too much for about everything. Too much for rent, clothes and recreation, too much for little luxuries here and there—these are the little things that bring about failure and ruin.

"Keep your expenses down to such a point that progress may be assured. No matter what you may do otherwise or how hard you may labor, failure will be the inevitable result of misadministration of your personal finances.

"Dickens, through the character of Macawber, emphasized the truth of this lesson. 'Annual income twenty pounds; annual expenditure, nineteen pounds six—result, happiness. Annual income twenty pounds; annual expenditure, twenty pounds six—result, misery.'

"The difference between nineteen pounds six and twenty pounds six is the difference between success and failure; between progress and disaster; between a fine, useful life and a ruined one made wretched by debt and worry.

"Watch your personal overhead. Keep down your fixed charges. Keep free of the yoke of bills that can't be paid. To do so is to grasp one of the essentials of personal upbuilding.

"These are lessons to learn as we put the days and months of this year behind us".

WISCONSIN BANKS.

Wisconsin banks, large and small, in town and city, are embarking on what they call a community building program. Nearly 900 banks, members of the State Bankers' association, have been invited to join in the project to develop the economic and social life of their communities.

Their plan calls for the use of printer's ink and newspaper space. In a series of 26 advertisements.

"DOWN ON THE FARM"

The following poem is credited to some Kentucky muse. The writer evidently either resides on a farm or was reared on one. He gives a good picture of the life of the average farmer who earns his daily bread by the sweat of his brow. While so many are concerned, it seems, just now about "relieving" the farmer, a reading of this poem may spur those who have the power to do things worth while for the farmer, to a faithful study of what ails him and as to the best and surest way of making it sure that he will realize what is due him:

"Down on the farm, 'bout half-past 4,
I slip on my pants and sneak out of the door;
Out of the yard I run like the dickens
To milk 10 cows and feed the chickens,
Clean out the barn, curry Nancy and Jiggs,
Separate the cream, and slop all the pigs,
Work two hours, then eat like a Turk,
And, by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

"Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack,
Throw a jug of water in an old grain sack,
Hitch up the horses, hustle down the lane,
Must get the hay in, for it looks like rain.
Look over yonder! Sure as I'm born,
Cattle on the rampage and cows in the corn!
Start across the medder, run a mile or two,
Heaving like I'm wind-broke, get wet clear through.
Get back to the horses, then for recompense
Nancy gets straddle the barbed-wire fence.
Joints all a-aching and muscles in a jerk,
I'm fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.

"Work all summer till winter is nigh,
Then figure up the books and heave a big sigh.
Worked all year, didn't make a thing;
Got less cash now than I had last spring.
Now, some people tell us that there aint no hell,
But they never farmed, so they can't tell.
When spring rolls 'round I take another chance,
While the fringe grows longer on my old gray pants.
Give my s'penders a hitch, my belt another jerk,
And, by heck, I'm ready for a full year's work."

MINISTRY—THE LAW OF LIFE

sponsibility to the family and of their ministry to the family needs. The table is a holy place of family communion and fellowship, where souls meet with souls, where personality is developed, where the lessons of life are learned, - the lessons of unity and fellowship, of love and loyalty, of temperance and self control, of ministry and service. It is thus that the law of life finds appropriate fulfillment in the sphere of the family and at the center of its life, hrough the interchange of the life of its members, and through mutual service rendered.

The application to your high calling as bankers is not the less vivid because its scene is changed, its relations enlarged and its purpose altered. Here, the table is not primarily the center of social fellowship, but the community center of commercial co-partnership, the food of the table is not primarily for physical refreshment, but for the sustenance of commercial life, the servers of the table fulfill their responsibility not primarily to the spiritual well being of those who share the bounty of the table, but to their material prosperity and security. Yet, I dare to say that in every case the primary purpose of the commercial table can only best be fulfilled when its secondary concomitant achievement has been attained, - i. e., that the bank as the artery of the commercial body will have best contributed to the life of the body when it has also so ministered to the fellowship of community life, as to promote its vigor and activity, its purity and integrity, its righteousness and self-control, and therefore also to its peace and happiness.

Here too the law of life has its application, the law that life is service. A bank is a corporation, whether it be a private bank or any other kind. A corporation is a united body. It is made up of constituent parts, - for our present purpose of stockholders and depositors. The parts hold not merely commercial relations but moral as well. The foundation of their relationship is confidence, - the motive of mutual business is faith without which not one step would be taken.

Confidence has its double application.

For those members of the bank who are its depositors or borrowers, i. e., users of its facilities, - confidence means a trust in the officers, the servers of the table, - trust in their integrity, yes, - but trust also in their ability as advisers and helpers. I venture to think that this latter trust is the one most often and most practically operative in the relation of banker and borrower, for example, - that in this case the banker is a commercial physician more often than the mere money lender, - that his advice is very often as balm to the commercial sore of a business patient, and just as often as light to a beclouded and bewildered business judgment of one for the moment lost in a commercial maze. The banker becomes the minister to a personal soul and to his spiritual need before he can rightly minister to his material need. Perhaps a failing confidence in himself of the patient, or a shaken faith in others, must be restored. Perhaps it is an overconfidence in self, or the temptation of the opportunist, that must be replaced with a reasonable faith in self or in Providence. Perhaps it is the righteous timidity of the inexperienced suing for the advice of the experienced expert in finance, that untried judgment may be corrected or confirmed and the courage of confidence gained.

In every case the banker is a trained business minister who is dealing not primarily with an abstract problem of commercial venture, but directly with a personality of known or discoverable integrity and capacity, and with his personal problems, simple or complex. To such an expert, clients of the bank come in confidence in the ability and integrity and wisdom of their adviser, and in the faith that the guidance sought will be unselfishly given.

And for the banker, confidence means a faith in the fundamental honesty of human nature; that while men make mistakes, while their sense of rectitude may be obscured at times, warped by self interest at others, confused by a passing false public opinion as to what business integrity is at still another, the basic fact that man intends to be honest with his fellow man is the foundation of business, and the sole ultimate security of commercial life. All the laws on the statute books cannot create this necessary condition of business security, however much they may help in protecting its sanctity from the inroads of the dishonest or the errors of the ignorant or misguided. Honor, integrity, righteousness are inner virtues in man, always inviting and receiving faith and confidence. Every check issued is a draft upon faith and every check paid a tribute to honor. In a congressional investigation, some years ago, the late Pierpont Morgan testified as a witness that in his enormous business as a banker, the collateral that he chiefly relied upon for the security of a loan was not the mortgage but the native integrity of the man, - that at times he had made loans of very large sums upon no collateral save faith in the invincible integrity of a man, whose honor he knew from experience. I have not quoted Mr. Morgan's exact language, while I think no violence has been done to the meaning of it.

I am intent to present the law of life as we have it from God, its Divine Source, - that life is movement fulfilled in service, - that the law of life is of universal application, whether to divine or human life, - that the conscious application, of it (as by man and by the Patern Man, Jesus the Son of God) is rightly called (not mere service which an ox or an ass or a tree must render), but is ministry which is the voluntary, yet compulsive offering of a free person consciously recognizing the purpose of life and lovingly consecrating his powers to the fulfill-

A FACT FIVE YEARS AGO AND STILL A FACT TODAY

MAY 17 1924

"Out of a clear sky, the Chrysler has brought the motor car industry to the point invariably reached in any industry of economic importance. + That is the point where revolutionary improvements and advancements begin to render the original invention obsolete—when previous practice is brought to a full stop. + That never happens until the newest product proves its right to precedence, by reason of greatly simplified design, greater efficiency and operating results that are radically different."

WHAT CHRYSLER HAS DONE

It is hard to recall the day when there were no Chrysler cars; difficult to remember a time when the flashing Chrysler wings had not yet appeared on the world's highways. And yet, that was not so long ago—only five years, in fact.

Where it has taken the average automobile ten to twenty-five years of gradual, plodding growth to achieve public acclaim, Chrysler has risen swiftly to a foremost and topmost place in the industry in less than five short years!

What Chrysler has done is without parallel. Overnight, a name became a symbol of speed, quality, beauty and safety. At Christmas, 1923, the Chrysler emblem meant nothing in the public mind. By Easter, 1924, it had come to stand for leadership—a claim undenied to this day.

Fads come and go. Some motor cars have their brief hour of popularity and then are forgotten. Chrysler's unprecedented leap into a position in the van of the industry was neither forced nor accidental. That place was won by inherent worth and undeniable value. Today, Chrysler is firmly entrenched at the top, offering the finest performance in its history. A ride is a revelation.

Worried Night after Night as health declined

"I SUFFERED frequently from nervous headaches, and I could not sleep well," says Mrs. Cora Dover, R. F. D. 2, Hickory Grove, S. C. "I was thin and pale. I was so weak I could scarcely walk.

"I tried several remedies but nothing seemed to help me. Night after night I worried because I could see I was going down-hill. I had my children to look after, and I was afraid of what would become of them if anything happened to me.

"I began to take Cardui. It wasn't long until I was beginning to pick up. My strength gradually began to return. I rested better at night and was less nervous. I took several bottles of Cardui, and when I had finished taking it I was in fine health."

PETITION FOR PARDON

To His Excellency, Theo. G. Bilbo, Governor of Mississippi.

We the under signed citizens of Grenada County, Miss. do most respectfully petition and ask that your Excellency grant a pardon to Lewis Liles, who, on the thirty-first day of Jan. 1929 in Circuit Court of Grenada County, Miss., plead Guilty to the charge of Grand Larceny and was sentenced on the thirty-first day of Jan. 1929 to the term of 1 year in the State Penitentiary of said State for said crime.

We respectfully show to your Excellency that this is Liles' first offense, that he is a young man of twenty-four years, that he has a wife and one small child that are dependent on him for their livlihood, that the amount involved in the case was the small amount of thirty dollars, that he has been a respected citizen of Grenada County, Miss., since childhood. We further wish to show to your Excellency that prison life to a boy like this is not for the betterment for either society or the individual, that Liles feels deeply the disgrace that he has brought upon himself and his family and we believe that if he is given a pardon that he will in the future make a better citizen.

We are advised that he has made a model prisoner since his incarceration and respectfully submit and ask that your Excellency grant him a pardon.

Respectfully submitted,

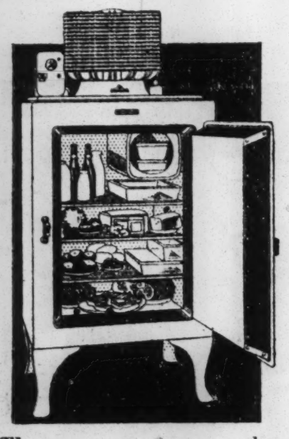
ALL MECHANISM ON TOP ...where it belongs!

THERE are many reasons why all the mechanism of the General Electric Refrigerator is placed on top of the cabinet. Here are 3 vital reasons:

1. Refrigerating - mechanisms develop heat in the process of cooling the interior of the refrigerator. This heat escapes and rises. Therefore, General Electric has placed the refrigerating mechanism on top so that the escaping heat travels away from the cabinet.

2. Placing all the mechanism on top of the cabinet achieves maximum food storage space within the cabinet.

3. With the mechanism on top, the inside of the cabinet is free from obstructions and easier to keep clean.



There are now more than 300,000 users and not one has ever spent a dollar for repairs.

When Dick Found His Marcia

By KATE EDMONDS

"NO," SAID the landlady stonily, "I'm sure I don't know where Miss Ford went to—some one said she had given up her position and gone West to act in the movies. Are you the young man she was sort of engaged to?"

Dick Reynolds nodded. "Yes, I got sick, and lost my job—and I just thought she'd forget."

"Yes—you look like the picture she had on her bureau. She didn't get any letters from you and so she just got pale and sick and went away. Sorry."

"Thank you," said Dick as he turned away. He wrote a letter to Marcia, addressed it in care of her old employers, marked it to be forwarded and waited. At last after months of fruitless waiting and searching he found a position in Chicago. Night after night he went to the movies, hoping for some clew, and then there came a time when he saw on a well acted screen drama—his own Marcia being kidnaped by a dark villain in a black evening cloak.

"Ain't it awful!" shivered a girl sitting next to Dick.

Her companion giggled. "It looks real, but 'tain't."

Dick found it difficult to believe that the characters were not real with Marcia's face so clear, so agonized.

"Hi!" yelled Dick, and everybody laughed. He looked fiercely around and sank back in his seat, grim and alert. He watched the picture until the doors closed and the next day he saw it again. By this time he was sure that his own sweetheart was acting in the movies. Then he saw the manager of the theater.

With the name of the producers he found the location of the company—Hollywood, California—and packing his grip he set out in search for Marcia. By this time he knew the picture by heart, learned that the name of the actress was Elizabeth Jayne, but strong in his own belief he declared the girl to be none other than Marcia.

At Hollywood the studios were all so busy that he barely escaped becoming famous because he had refused so many chances to act as a substitute or an extra in one of the many companies. Once he had an adventure that he never forgot.

"Say, young feller," yelled a hot-looking man, as Dick approached a studio. "Want a job?"

"Looking for a girl," returned Dick.

"Plenty of girls here—can you ride?"

"Yes."

"Stunts?"

"Cavalry."

"Good. Come in. Man gone sick—scene waiting; you got to shoot a man and carry off a girl."

Dick grinned and followed the excited director. He was led into a dressing room, given a cowpuncher's outfit of clothes and came rolling out with a swagger that made the director stare.

"Say, you've been a puncher?"

"Yes."

"Steady job, maybe—now you hop into my car, the rest of the bunch waiting out on location ten miles away; just sent in word that Ames has broken his leg; listen now." He drove the car recklessly while he poured into Dick's ear the instructions he was to follow. "When you're called you ride up to the door of the cabin, shoot Arnold—he's the leading man—and grab the girl up and ride off with her, anywhere—out of the picture—until you're called again, and then you—" and so on—until Dick felt qualified to do his part perfectly; yet when he saw the expectant company his wits almost deserted him. He watched the progress of the play with feverish interest because there was a girl—

She had appeared at intervals in the play, and while there was a vague familiarity about her face and even her graceful walk, he could not make up his mind whether it was his Marcia or not. Her face was made up a little, as was his own, and both were part of a grotesque looking company. Some one told him her name—Elizabeth Jayne—and because he was afraid to have his dream shattered, he did not pursue the subject further. Then it dawned on him that this was the girl he was to rescue—surely, he would know then!

He played his part extremely well and found a strange fascination in the work; the girl looked at him once or twice with a faint show of interest, but the grease paint disguised him well. Then came the moment when Dick, the bad man, was to kidnap the hero's sweetheart. Dick mounted his horse, dashed up to the cabin door, shot the hero with a blank cartridge and, swooping down, gathered the girl's slight form in his arms and dashed away to the big tree where he had been told to wait the blare of the director's megaphone. "That was fine," said the girl, cordially, as they stopped under the tree. "Set me down, please."

"Finding's keeps," grinned Dick, looking her straight in the eyes. "Oh!" she cried, then "Dick!" and she was hugging him tightly.

"Hi!" the megaphone blared at them angrily. "Quit that—it's not in the picture!"

"It's in our picture," grinned Dick as he rode up to the director. "I just found my girl and—"

"Excused!" bellowed the director; "stay out for awhile and come back when you get over it—meanwhile we'll do something else. Shoot!"

BE A GOOD BOY—GOOD-BY

How oft in my dreams I go back to that day
When I stood at our old garden gate,
And started for school in full battle array,
Well armed with primer and slate.
And as the latch fell I felt myself free,
And gloried, I fear, on the sly,
Till I heard a kind voice that whispered to me;
"Be a good boy—good-by!"

"Be a good boy—good-by!" It seems
They have followed me all through these years.
They have given form to my youthful dreams,
They have scattered my foolish fears.
They have stayed my feet on many a brink
Unseen by a blinded eye,
For just in time I would stop and think,
"Be a good boy—good-by!"

Oh, brother of mine, in the battle of life,
Just starting or nearing its close,
This motto aloft in the midst of the strife
Will conquer wherever it goes.
Mistakes we will make, for each of us errs,
But, brother, just honestly try
To accomplish your best, whatever occurs.
"Be a good boy—good-by!"

OTHER NEGROES WERE ENTERTAINED BY PRESIDENTS IN FORMER YEARS, SAYS STATEMENT ISSUED JULY 7TH

Washington, July 7.—The office of Secretary Davis made public late today a report which was described at the labor department as listing negroes who had been entertained by the president of the United States, compiled to show that Mrs. Hoover set no precedent in entertaining the wife of Representative Oscar DePriest, negro, of Illinois, at a White House tea.

The "preliminary report" to Mr. Davis was signed by Karl F. Phillips, a negro, commissioner of conciliation, and covered "various entertainments at the White House" from 1878 to 1929. At the end it said: "The additional search, directed by the secretary, is in course of progress."

The White House disclaimed knowledge of the report. Secretary Davis had left the city for the holiday before it was made public.

The report, dated June 29, read:

"1878: President Rutherford B. Hayes was a cousin of President Patton (white) of Howard University and was entertained by him at the university. At this entertainment President Hayes met John M. Langston, the first dean of the University law school, upon whom President Hayes later called, socially, at the Langston home.

"1886: . . The minister to Haiti was entertained by President Cleveland.

"1903: . . John C. Dancy (recorder of deeds) and wife were entertained at the White House by President Roosevelt.

"1903: . . Dr. Booker T. Washington, principal of Tuskegee Institute, dined at the White House with President Roosevelt.

Roland Hart and his wife, enroute to their home at Brown's Mill above Haserway, had a very close call Saturday night. Traveling on the highway in a one horse wagon a rear end collision by an autoist threw both of them out upon the ground with injuries that disabled both of them. The wagon was completely demoblished and the harness torn from the mule. It was an accident that was unavoidable on account of the short curve on the highway and quite dark. Every assistance was given them and a concession to pay all damages. At this writing Mrs. Ann Hart is yet unable to move her limbs but feels that she is improving. If no complications set in she hopes to be able to be up in a few days.

Miss Estella Weathers, daughter of Mr. Mathew Weathers, who has been attending school in Detroit, Mich., is now on a vacation visiting up in Canada, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N. Y. From stated accounts, she made the best grade of any in her class. Her parents justly feel proud of her. She will finish next year.

Mrs. Helen Hardiman, after a siege of illness lasting several months, departed this life last Friday night. She leaves a husband and several children to mourn her loss.

The announcement that the normal begins here next week puts in motion preparations for caring for the several teachers who will be in Grenada for several weeks. Usually, teachers from nine counties find their way here to be in the Grenada normal. There is no reason why it should not be well attended. It is centrally located and as good a faculty as can be found in the state and plenty of accommodations for the teaching force.

Looking the Part---

There's a pertinent story of a well dressed gentleman who entered a library of which he was not a member, spent several hours of pleasurable reading, and was treated with the utmost courtesy.

While there he heard a man whose clothes bore evidence of cheapness and lack of pride vociferously demanding entrance and declaring: "I tell you I am a member!" To which the attendant replied: "Well, you don't look it."

For the first time the thought dawned on the well dressed gentleman that he was in a private club, and he took his leave unmolested. His appearance had gained him entrance without question.

SOCIETY GIRL INITIATES CRUSADE TO IMPROVE THE AMERICAN CUISINE

Former Debutante of Quaker City Is Founder of Unique School of the Culinary Art.

By RACHEL PEMBERTON

MISS EDITH BARRATT, who made her bow to Philadelphia society three years ago, is the founder of a cooking school which is probably unique in the United States, both in its aim and in the character of its students.

In the kitchen of the Barratt's Philadelphia home, debutantes and young married women, the younger generation of society in the Quaker City, compete for culinary honors with stately dowagers who rule their social world with an iron hand.

When I hear about Miss Barratt's school, and that she was soon going abroad again to resume her course at the Cordon Bleu, the famous cooking school in Paris where so many of the world's greatest chefs have studied, I hurried to interview her.

The Origin of the Idea

"Oh!" she said after I had explained the purpose of my call. "Am I really becoming famous enough for that?" She smiled and seemed embarrassed, but she promised to tell me what I wanted to know.

"I want to know lots of things about you," I said. "First of all, how did you get the idea that you would like to teach cooking?"

Miss Barratt hesitated. "It all goes back to a motor trip I took through Portugal, Spain, Morocco and France. If it hadn't been for the trip I wouldn't have followed it by staying for three months with a French family near Paris. If I hadn't stayed with them, I'd never have realized how much some of the French home-cooked dishes could add to our American menu. And if I hadn't realized that, I wouldn't have taken a course at the Cordon Bleu."

"After the course was over, I suppose you were all ready to start your school," I said.

"Oh, no!" Miss Barratt shook her head. "It never occurred to me to organize a school. I thought I could show our own cook how to make the dishes I liked. It was just for my family's sake and my own. We all liked good food and used to get tired of the monotony of our meals. That's the great trouble with American cooking. We don't have enough variety, and the French can teach us a lot about how to make the most of the dishes we do serve.

The founder of the unique school illustrating the delicate technique of mixing ingredients

Miss Edith Barratt whose trips to France result in the importation of recipes for new dishes to tickle the American palate

"Take the single matter of seasoning," she continued. "That's a complete mystery to most American cooks. When the average cook over here throws a little salt and pepper into the pot she thinks she has done her full duty. The French, on the other hand, use all sorts of seasonings to blend and point up the flavors.

Seasoning Secrets

"For instance, they'll put a pinch of sugar in a potage to give it a little added zest, or they'll add a half teaspoonful to sweet-juiced vegetables while they're cooking, to accentuate their natural flavors. We hardly ever think of sugar as a seasoning, and the same thing is true of many condiments and spices."

"Then your school is really a crusade against monotony and lack of zest in the American diet," I suggested.

"I suppose you might say that," Miss Barratt replied. "I hadn't thought of it as anything nearly so important, but in a small way that's just what it is. You see, when my friends heard I had studied cooking in France they came to me and asked me to teach them. I started with just a few, but they told their friends, mothers, aunts, and cousins. Almost before I knew it—— Well, there was my school."

During the school's first session throughout the winter and spring of 1929, Miss Barratt had thirty pupils. Most of the old students have enrolled for next winter, and Miss Barratt is swamped with new applicants. In addition, she has been asked to organize similar schools in two nearby cities. Her crusade for an improved American cuisine is spreading by leaps and bounds, and there is no foreseeing how far-reaching it will be.

ment of that purpose, - that the law of life is equally applicable to every avenue of life, to the religious, the social and the business alike, - that while life may have many avenues through which its activities may be manifested, the life is one, and the law one.

The distinction cannot, therefore, be justly made between a religious standard and a social and a business standard, fundamentally, is the product not of human laws to govern life but of divine purpose in the life He creates. No better demonstration of this can be found than in the catastrophe that follows the effort of a man made law to supplant the law of divine purpose, as when the law governing health is supplanted or disregarded, - or in the moral sphere when men put a lie for truth and knavery for honesty.

There is an expression, I hope and believe passing out of use, "Business is business". It is most harmful, - not in the simple, positive, true statement that business is business, - but in the unhappy implied innuendo that business is not business, - that it is the state of being busy, not in right doing, but in wrong doing, - that it is not applying the law of life to commercial enterprise, but is applying the enterprise of quick wit and selfish license to commercial life. In this degraded interpretation of the phrase it is the application of bandit, hold-up law to the honorable profession of commerce.

If I have interpreted aright the movement of commercial life, and especially that of banking, no one has done more to eradicate both the practice and the phrase which characterized it, than the ministers in the Temple of Commerce, among whom you are numbered. As I have read the utterances of the great banking associations and of the leaders of the powerful Chambers of Commerce and the like, as expressed through their influential organs, the call to righteousness, the condemnation of dishonor, the demonstration of the fruitfulness of honor and integrity have come with powerful, compelling influence from their souls, - souls convinced of the exaltation of righteousness and indignantly outraged at the charlatan and his iconoclastic destruction of the faith of society. It is not the law, but the compelling force of righteous wisdom and integrity that is winning the battle for the honor of society, and for the stability of commerce.

You will pardon me for detaining you a few moments longer, while I pay a debt of honor to my gifted and beloved friend, Tolbert Thomas, who stands as the peer of all among the honored roll of citizens who are serving Mississippi best and who stand as the loftiest examples of character which we would have our sons emulate. I have known Tol Thomas since we were comparatively young men, and always as a man whose judgment is illuminatingly clear and true, - whose business life is a vantage of always high ministry to his fellowmen, - whose sense of justice and consideration is profoundly loyal to high and low alike, to white and black alike, - whose life of fellowship embraces all men as the family of God, - whose ideal of citizenship is "to render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's", - and in the rendering to offer his highest, truest, finest gifts of God to the fulfillment of the blessed privilege of citizenship in God's Kingdom and in man's commonwealth.

I feel myself honored in the welcome you have given me to your business family, on this occasion of your semi-annual assembly. Long, perpetually may your splendid organization live to continue your conspicuously fine service to our state, and your ministry to our beloved fellow citizens.

TELLS OF AUTO TRIP TO OKOLONA JULY 4TH

the trellis, the rounded corners and other artistic finishes charm the eye and beget marked admiration, but they are having to be constantly "done over" while the rocks which hold them remain as true and steady as the sunlight.

The farmer is the rock upon which the prosperity of the Nation abides. There is no disagreement on this point. This is conceded in the marts of trade and in all intelligent avenues of business, it therefore seems to be logical to say that the farmer must come out of the hole into which he has fallen.

If this be true, then a golden harvest awaits this section, and in a peculiar way is this true of Grenada and the territory east. Of course the delta is par excellence when it comes to richness of soil and to producing those crops which grow more luxuriantly and more satisfactorily than in the Valley of the Nile.

What if Grenada had a large department store here today—trade would come for 50 miles eastward. What if Grenada had a cotton factory, a clothing manufacturing plant and a tile and brick factory? These things or similar enterprises are in the not dim distance— the point is that those of the present may hasten the day.

Again let us repeat that the practically level and well cared for farming lands east will impress even the casual observer. Calhoun county is one of fine farms, particularly the central portion, and it has a citizenship of sturdy farmers who live on their farms and who make a living by giving individual attention to their farms.

The view of Chickasaw county that one gets on highway No. 8 is bound to make a most favorable impression. The land lies well. The crops show a fertile soil and the farm homes show that the farmers have not played hookey very much. Houston, until some thirty odd years ago, was the sole county site, but now Okolona on the east is also a court district. Evidently some of the leading early settlers in that section were admirers of Sam Houston, the Texas soldier, citizen and statesman.

Buena Vista, an old town with much history, is some ten miles east of Okolona. There used to be a college there that reached out and got hold of many young men and young women many of whom perhaps would never have looked inside of college walls but for the Buena Vista normal.

As our car sped along over this highway, thoughts of years gone by came vividly to mind when a young doctor, A. J. Pulliam, came to my father's home when I was quite a child hunting a location and a place to board. He located in what is now called the Oxberry community. He was a fine character, a noble physician and a most excellent citizen. He married Miss Augusta Edger, one of the writer's early school teachers, and a most lovely woman. She was one of several daughters in the Edger family. They were cultured, refined and were among the closest friends of our father's family. There was a large family of the Pulliams in Chickasaw county. After Dr. Pulliam's marriage, another daughter, Minnie, of the Edger family, became the wife of another Chickasaw countian, Mr. Bene. Many were the experiences and incidents in connection with Dr. Pulliam that came to our mind as we traversed the soil of the county which gave him birth.

We enjoyed the day in Okolona. It has some very handsome homes. The residential section is particularly pretty. The beautiful and well cared for oaks and other shade trees pay mute tribute to the refined and aesthetic taste of the home owners. The business houses were practically all closed thus we had little opportunity, had we had the time, to see much of the business district.

The town of Okolona is just completing a natatorium and a skating rink at a cost for both, so the honorable mayor advised, of not over $10,000.

The natatorium is 172 feet in length and 62 feet wide. It is built for three depths of water, 3, 5 and 7 feet, and to hold 581,000 gallons of water. The walls are 3 feet thick. The mayor was questioned as to how the city got the funds and his answer was, "out of the profits of the water and light plant". When asked how it was to be maintained, he stated that season tickets for adults would be sold for $7.50 and for children for $3.50. Single tickets for adults, 25 cents, and for children, 15 cents. The mayor also stated that a lifeguard had been employed for the summer months at $80. and a general utility man for $40. The mayor stated that the matter had been well considered and that they were convinced that within 5 or 6 years the revenue would pay the cost of erection. The skating rink appears to be about 125 by 80 feet. Besides the natatorium and the skating rink, there is a separate wading place for small children. The natatorium wading pool and skating rink are located on the fair grounds.

The Sentinel has on different occasions urged the wisdom of a swimming pool for Grenada. It wonders why some of those who have money to invest do not place some of it in such an enterprise. Besides the mere paltry dollars in dividends, there would be dividends in the joy and entertainment of the youth of the town, and better still, the contemplative minded would find his days sweetened by what a pool would be worth in health building. Why not a natatorium for Grenada? In this connection, might it not be well to discuss with the authorities of Grenada College a co-partnership in the natatorium which the college is soon to erect?

The pleasure of the day was greatly heightened because of the grandson, "little Ellett", not yet two years old. He asked many questions. He slept in our lap both in going and in returning and was most perfectly contented throughout the day when, as he calls us, "Pampa", was near.

It is refreshing to get away from the grind of business any time, but there is something more than refreshing in what one gets out where the birds sing undisturbed and where the waters trickle over the rocks and where the grass and the flowers speak of Nature's God and where the trees sing a song of praise as the unseen breeze disturbs the beautiful foliage. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork".

SABATINI, excellent historian and accomplished romancer, uncovered a mine of rare material for stories when he began delving into the life of that remarkable personage, Cesare Borgia. While the dominating, sinister, magnificent duke is not the hero of this tale, his personality pervades it from beginning to end.

No one is more successful than Sabatini in taking a past and glamorous era—especially the good old swashbuckling days—and making it live again. Here is a lively, exciting, colorful story of that Fifteenth century Italy where, probably more than anywhere else, all was fair in love and war and prizes went to the bold, the ambitious and the best plotters.
